DIAMONDS JUST BREAD AND CHEESE
to CECIL RHODES

Leading Character in "Pink Gods"
Modelled After the Late South African

A person to whom the most beautiful diamonds were merely "bread and cheese!"

This was the financier, philanthropist, imperialist and one of the most romantic figures of his time—Cecil Rhodes. Through the Delibers syndicate, he practically controlled the output and price of diamonds from the Kimberley fields, the largest in the world, but he is often referred to them in the words quoted. However, he did not abuse his power, but used it for the betterment of Rhodesia, and the furtherance of his pet dream of a South African Federation.

The idea of an unscrupulous man in such a position is a fascinating one, and Cynthia Stockley developed it in the story upon which Penrhyn Stanley's production of "Pink Gods" is based. The character of John Quelch is supposed to have been suggested by the romantic life of Cecil Rhodes, but the dramatic adaptation by J. E. Nash and Sonja Levin includes incidents which have never been credited to the late "master of Kimberley."

John Quelch subjected men to involuntary operations for the recovery of diamonds which they had stolen from him; Cecil Rhodes gave thousands of pounds to charity, and wept when a poor woman told him of her child's hunger. John Quelch used the flashing gems he owned to test the beautiful women he met; Cecil Rhodes received many notes from women, which he had his secretary answer, without granting interviews.

But John Quelch is human and the story of "Pink Gods" which comes to the Empress Theatre next Mon. Tues. has a human theme; the almost hypnotic power of jewels over some women, making them forget duty and self-respect, if not honor. Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood are featured and the supporting cast includes Anna Q. Nilsson, Raymond Hatton, Adolphe Menjou and others.

best friend. But what it took to make a wild man out of a tame one, Georgiana had. And when it came time to make a tame one out of a wild one she was likewise on the job.

The only thing Georgiana couldn't do was find a real sinner. But it wasn't a real sinner she wanted, after all.

A MIX-UP IMMINENT

It is recognized in official channels that the present liquor act will be very difficult to enforce while the plebiscite is impending. Moreover, if for instance, one of the questions other than prohibition is endorsed by the province, it will be practically impossible to adequately enforce the existing law thereafter. This has given rise to the belief in many quarters that in the event of government control being authorized, a special session of the legislature will probably be held in order to practically validate the new act that will be necessary, otherwise all liquor legislation will be "up in the air," until the next regular session.

THE SUNSET.
An artist painted a picture. One ever on his canvas wide. And the wonder of its creation Was planned with a master's pride. The colors with prodigal splendor In riotous beauty unfolded From the flaming fire of its banners To the piteous shower of its gold.

Then out of the chaos of beauty A semblance of order grew; On the distant shores of an ocean A city rose to our view. Its streets were paved with Jasper. Its gates with pearl were laid. And the sky that broadened over it Was sapphire and amber and jade.

Then lavishly throughout the picture With skill unnumbered and free, He scattered a myriad of cloudlets Like lakes on an opal sea. They glowed with a tropical glamor Exotic and end line. 'Twas a symphony greater and fairer Than man's puny art could define. Our hearts grew quiet and thoughtful As we gazed on the sunset's glow. It seemed like the gates of Heaven Thrown open to let us know The glories and wondrous beauties That were kept for us pure in heart. For the ones who were ever faithful. Who had chosen the better part.

Then the sunset's matchless colors Slowly faded from our sight. And the Western sky lost its brilliance As the twilight merged into night. And the Artist laid his brushes Aside for another time When the canvas again invited The Master's touch sublime. —Ethel Muma.

CONSTANCE BINNEY COMING IN BIR EMOTIONAL PLAY

Constance Binney, dainty little star of two short years, is rapidly graduating from mere pretty-girl roles into strong, emotional acting. She has proved her ability to handle difficult roles by her splendid work in "The Case of Becky" and "First Love," two recent pictures.

Now she is announced to appear as the star of "Midnight," a play by Harvey Thew, in which she has the role of a girl who committed the folly of marrying a worthless adventurer who disappeared the day under circumstances which pointed to his death. How the spectre of this grisly folly rises up to haunt the girl when, a few years later, a real love comes into her life, makes strong drama and provides Miss Binney with a magnificent picture.

"Midnight" will be seen here for two days beginning Wednesday of next week at the Empress Theatre.

CYNTHIA STOCKLEY
STORY FILMED

Those who remember the screen versions of Cynthia Stockley's "Sins of Romance," "April Folly," and "Peggy," will welcome the news that another of her famous works has been screened at the Empress Theatre and will be seen at this theatre Mon.-Tues. This is "Pink Gods," adapted from the story "Pink Gods and Blue Demons." It is the story of a woman who wrecked her life because of a craze for diamonds and who was saved from ruin in a providential manner. Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood are featured.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE IN SINNER-HUNTING ROLE

If you think it is the easiest thing in the world to be wicked you should see Constance Talmadge in "In Search of a Sinner," her latest production adapted by John Emerson and Anita Loos and distributed by First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which will begin a two-day engagement at the Empress Theatre, on Fri.-Sat.

WHAT MADE ME HAPPY

"I was congratulating myself that I had passed the winter without catching a cold, when I got one at the beginning of last May. It was because I was run down. Being run down I had some trouble in getting rid of this cold. I was a nervous wreck. I would wake up regularly mornings feeling like some terrible calamity would take place. Although we were constantly off, I felt sure my husband was going to lose everything. The children worried me. If they made the least noise, I would get into a terrible temper. I would scold them so that I am sure they hated me. I would be mad with myself after it was over and make up my mind never to let it happen again. I would go to bed at night and begin to think and picture dreadful things which might happen to me and my family. I would lay in bed for some time, sometimes daylight, until I was so weak that I could scarcely raise my head. I would wake next day just as tired as when I laid down. After a while I got so that I didn't care what happened. The children annoyed me and I wouldn't have cared if they had left me for good. I felt that it was only a matter of time before I would lose my mind. I knew that my symptoms were due to a run-down condition and that if I could only get something to build me up, I might be all right. I knew that there must be some good tonic but most of them made such foolish claims that I was afraid of them. Happening one day to run across a booklet about Carnot, I was impressed with the moderate way this preparation was described, so I made up my mind I would try it. Faded and today I am the happiest and healthiest woman living. I haven't a care in the world. Instead of running away from me, my children are now with me all the time. My husband tells me that my disposition is as near an angel as any human being's can be, but of course he is prejudiced. I don't believe I have a nerve in my body now."

Carnot is sold by your druggist, and if you can conscientiously say, "I have tried it, and it hasn't done you any good, return the empty bottle to him and he will refund your money."

BOY SCOUTS IN FIRE PREVENTION.

The Boy Scouts in all their camping and fishing expeditions have never yet been charged with causing a forest fire, said the manager of the Canadian Forestry Association in a newspaper interview recently.

The Scouts are diligently trained to take such care with their camp fires, building them in safe places and totally extinguishing them before leaving camp, that the outlandish activities of the Boy Scout organizations in the woods are never accompanied by any forest losses.

OPEN THE BOX AND MIRACLES WILL OCCUR

"England's troubles will continue until the bishops open Joanna Southcott's box of manuscripts." That is the message in a letter which was encountered with increasing frequency these days in subway trains. In London buses, in fact in public places wherever people congregate, writes the London correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger. Who then, was Joanna Southcott and what is her mysterious message? Inquiry reveals that this rather unusual phenomenon, which has arrived with the first spring flowers, is only the renewal of an age-old legend which has gone on intermittently for more than a century. The bishops, then, entreated to stay the peril that threatens Britain, are of course the bishops of the Church of England. The inspiration of the movement is a humble non-conformist woman, who at her death 100 years ago had gathered around her a following that persists to this day. Joanna Southcott was no less a personage than one of the weak things of this world, divinely chosen to confound the things that are mighty.

The Gift of Prophecy

They believe that she had the gift of prophecy, was divinely inspired and that she received direct a revelation which will save England and the rest of mankind from all woes. In the present generation, it is another, a persistent woman, who, if she does not confound the mighty English bishops will at least give them uneasy days and nights unless and until they open Joanna's box of sealed manuscripts the contents of which no one can ever guess. That woman is Mrs. Rachel J. Fox, of Falmouth. There would seem to be a spirit of fairness in her challenge to the English bishops to open the mysterious packet of manuscripts and expose Joanna's teachings as a heresy—if they can. Upon Joanna Southcott's death her sealed box of writing was committed to charge of one Rev. Thos. Foley by her express direction. The box, unopened to this day, has been transmitted from one generation of her followers to another awaiting fulfillment of the revelation of the prophetic that twenty-four bishops of the Church of England should unseal it in the presence of her followers. Only the bishops can open the box. It is useless for any one else to apply.

Applied in 1918

From time to time, Mrs. Fox explains, the bishops have been approached and twenty-four of their number applied for the box in 1918. But when they refused to allow the Southcott followers to be present at the opening, it was refused. Will the bishops act in response to the widespread appeal in which not only Joanna Southcott's thousands of followers in England are interested, but her adherents in the United States as well?

"The bishops or their appointed representative should act when the month of May comes around," said Mrs. Fox. "Perhaps circumstances will do what words fail to do in bringing this way of escape before the people at a crucial time. Crisis after crisis has befallen our country. Nothing has improved in Ireland; every country is on the point of despair of getting itself straight; Turkey must be turned out of Europe and will be long bringing about the war which will be her doom, for Joanna's word was to come to pass in every particular when she was no more. And after all my lands had been visited 'England must fear her fall.' It is hard to understand just why the bishops will not grant what seems to be a simple request. The number of interested persons who think the mystery box should be opened is by no means confined to the adherents of the prophetic.

Believes Her Deluded

One of the supporters of the petition for opening of the mysterious box is the Rev. Dr. Isaac Hartill, a widely known London clergyman, who is pastor of the Orange Street Congregational Church.

"Although personally I regard Joanna Southcott as an entirely deluded woman, I think her followers are justified in making a renewed appeal to the bishops," said Dr. Hartill. "The reluctance of the bishops has deepened the apprehension that the sealed documents may reveal something of a disastrous character. This feeling of fear and suspense is not good for the community. If the documents are of national interest and importance, as they purport to be, the nation has the right to demand that their contents be made known. When the secrets of the box are disclosed they can be judged on their merits."

Not a Spiritualist

Mrs. Fox, who is a widely known writer on religious subjects, has published several books, and many pamphlets on the teachings of Joanna Southcott. According to Mrs. Fox, Joanna prophesied more than a hundred years ago that London would be attacked from the air as it was during the war, that England should possess Egypt, that England should possess Jerusalem when she should join in the war against the Turks and that the Turks would be driven from Europe.

"The beginning of miracles," said Mrs. Fox, "will be at the opening of the box and Christ will be known in the breaking of the seals as he was known in the breaking of bread. Please do not think I am a spiritualist. I can't help receiving from the Spirit that guidance which has caused me to write more than I ever understood, but I seek no medium, nor did I ever expect to have the messages from Joanna which I have received. These messages light up the whole of her call, which it should be understood she did not grasp herself when alive, and which we only one hundred years later understand by the power of the same Spirit of God which made her indite her books. We feel that everywhere the way is opening to appreciate Joanna at her true value."

Cecil Hamilton returned to his home on 20th street last Monday evening after an absence of several years spent in different parts of Canada.

THE SALVATION ARMY Has Ever Been A Great Reconstructing Force

Broken things have ever been held in its heart and cared for by its hand. Remnants in Life's struggle have been grieved and remade in wondrous fashion. Experience has equipped it for the work of this hour. It has ministered to the troops in a way which has called forth the unqualified confidence and affection of our Armies.

It came into being for the purpose of reconstructing broken lives, and has carried on its work with phenomenal success. Look at this record of service for reconstructing humanity.

Its Rescue Work is reconstruction for the fallen and outcast of our cities. 85 per cent. of the cases handled by the Army have turned out well.

Prison work has brought about the reconstruction of thousands of the criminal classes. Redeemed lives testify to this fact. Men's Social Work for the down-and-out judiciously and kindly done has remade the lives of multitudes. Poor Relief Work has reconstructed the prosperity of great numbers of families.

Inheritance Homes, Children's Homes, and Maternity Hospitals, Farm Colonies, Criminal Tribe Settlements in India, Leprosy Work in Java and countless other agencies have been working reconstructing the world over.

CHICKERING, FATHER OF THE AMERICAN PIANO

On Saturday there will be a great banquet in Boston to celebrate the centenary of the building of the first Chickering piano, and in other cities there will be concerts and addresses commemorating the event. The Chickering was not the first piano to be made in the United States, but by common consent Jonas Chickering is conceded to be the father of American pianoforte building. He contributed greatly to the craft. He started as a poor boy and died a rich man, the valued friend of many of the great artists of the day, and one of the leading benefactors of his city. In 1802 he had 300 workmen employed and was turning out thirteen hundred pianos a year. His was one of the most important industries in Boston at that time, and when in 1815 his factory burned down and he built another it was the largest building in the country, with the exception of the Capitol at Washington.

Bought by George H.

Pianos, we should think, are not articles frequently sent from one country to another. England has its Broadwood and many others, Germany its Eschkeins, the United States the Chickering and Steinway, and Canada its several fine pianos. Speaking broadly of each country is satisfied with its own product. The piano that was responsible for Chickering becoming a piano builder was an English instrument, tiny, tinkling uplily manufactured in London in 1782 by Christopher Ganer. It was bought by no less illustrious a patron of the arts than George III. for presentation to his favorite daughter, the Princess Amelia, and was by her played for some years, at the court of which she probably soothed her father in his hours of mental disturbance.

Chickering Inspired

In time the little instrument became the property of the Court Chaplain, who sent it to his daughter, who was the wife of George Osborn, Esq., a well-known pianist. It seems not to have been particularly valued as a treasure, for it found its way to Miss Susannah Rowson's Select Academy for Young Ladies, where the young ladies strummed it with ill-fitting curved fingers, no doubt. One of the pupils was the daughter of Gen. Montgomery, who lived in New Ipswich, and taking a fancy to the instrument, he bought it at the door of the government. This is obvious at the close of the question. While more than 100 bills were introduced at the 1922 session of the legislature, at the session just closed only 82 bills were on the order paper. Of these, two were dropped, four were withdrawn, nine never were introduced, and only 67 eventually were passed. But these 67 embraced such vital legislation as the new Debt Adjustment Act, setting up a bureau much along the lines of the Saskatchewan Debt Adjustment Bureau, and further emancipating the Drouth Area Relief Act so that creditors now have the courts again as their weapon of last resort.

Then there was the hacking down of numerous so-called "services" which

LEGISLATION OF WISDOM / CHARACTER AT LAST SESSION

Edmonton, April 23.—While the legislature which prorogued on Saturday did not enact as many bills by 90 per cent as it did in the preceding year of 1922, seldom has there been a session which dealt with so much important legislation directly affecting the lives and welfare of the people of Alberta. In dozens of cases, amendments to existing legislation were equally or even more important than the original legislation which they amended.

Liquor Legislation

Outstanding, of course, is the liquor and beer referendum, which the house whipped into shape after a week of the hardest work and severest fighting that the capital has known for many a long year. Though the government sought to avoid direct responsibility for the form of the ballot, which ever side loses, "yes" or "no" is as certain as fate to lay the blame at the door of the government. It cannot escape. This is obvious at the ready from the attitude of frantic proponents on each side of the question.

By a statute law amendment put through at the last moment, the house virtually emasculated the Highway Act by leaving discretionary powers of expenditure in the hands of the minister where they resided prior to the passing of the Highway Bill. Numerous other amendments of a like nature went through.

have been furnishing a fat living for a horde of government officials. Though much remains to be done yet along these lines, certain branches of the public service, such as the telephone department were mercifully freed of superfluous employees.

Other Curtailments

In addition, the government put its foot down hard on the expansion of payments under the Mothers' Allowance Act and the system of making loans to Normal School students. That the government was badly frightened by the enormously increasing expenditures of administration, was very evident, and it is a certainty that more trimming is to follow during the present year.

Acts Tightened Up

On the other hand, the government

tightened up the Gasoline Tax Act, increased the tax from one to three per cent on timber permits, taxed slot machines $50 each per year, put a tax of three per cent on gross profits of soft drink sales, adopted a new system of taxing mine owners on a percentage basis; in short, sought out for more revenue in every possible direction. All of these touch the average man in the pocket, where the average man is most sensitive.

Robert Stead Writes Once More of Canadian Homestead Life

"Neighbours," a Happy Novel of the Northwest, His Latest and Best

The Second Great Wave of Settlement
The Theme of an Absorbing Romance

Stead finds Delightful Material in the Modern Saskatchewan Home.

Humour and Pathos no less than Love and Achievement make an Authentic Picture of our Country at its Best.

Canada's Most Widely Read Author again gives Proof of his Gift for Realistic Writing.

ROBERT STEAD.
Author of "Neighbours," "Domestic Affairs," "The Openers," "The House-Builder," etc.

When Robert Stead was only a lad, I see from a recent biographical sketch before me, he bought out a lumber mill. I wonder if his memories are as at once connected with the opening paragraph of this latest novel of his, "Neighbours." My earliest recollection links back to a grey stone house by a road entering a little Ontario town. Across the road was a millpond, and across the millpond was a mill, an old-fashioned wooden mill which was the occasion and support of the little town. Beside the mill was a water-wheel, not a modern turbine, a wooden wheel which, on a sunny day, sprayed a mist of jewels into the river beneath with the prodigality of a fairy prince.

Simply there must be much of Robert Stead himself in a book which is so instinct with simple reality as this one. "Neighbours" opens in a little Ontario town, as described above, where two families of young people, cousin brother and sister in law, live in the house, and their families desire to settle in the West. They make the long trip to the Saskatchewan country, where each takes up a homestead. From this point on, "Neighbours" is not only a fascinating novel, but a permanent contribution to history. The account of the building of a homestead community on the western plains will be an authentic reference, generations after the homesteader has disappeared. For it is presented with beautiful faithfulness and understanding. A vein of genuine humour enters the story here also, which is not lost to the close. Old Jake appears on the scene as official "locator" for the pulchre "green-brown" settler, and his methods and comment are situation in themselves. I have read somewhere in the press that Stead had a hard time convincing date for book form. It can easily be believed, for despite the author's efforts, or thanks, perhaps, to his broad-mindedness, a great deal of the original still remains. "Neighbours" is a refreshing interlude wherever they appear.

The variety of the characters which Stead has brought together in the story, does credit to his versatility and insight. They not only add to the feeling of reality which pervades the book, but are a chief part of its charm and readability. There is the real western farmer, the Scotch family, "The Swensons," a Peck family, the little English widow, and Spoof. Spoof is the young Englishman who supplies the touch of mystery and unexpectedness for the love story which will keep the reader on his toes up to the very last.

For good reading and a real appreciation of Canadian literature, "Neighbours" is a book indeed. On the side of the fact that it will probably be one of the best and most readable of the year, it deserves high praise as a delightful piece of work. Stead is one author who has never "let the public down" through a series of disappointing publications. "The Openers," "The House-Builder," "Domestic Affairs" have brought their author.

- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup raisins

Cream butter, add beaten eggs, then flour, baking powder and salt which have been sifted together, and milk. At the last stir in dates which have been pitted and cut into small pieces. Bake about 25 minutes in greased muffin tins in hot oven. If a nice muffin is desired, add 1/2 cup sugar to dry ingredients.

COFFEE CAKE

- 1 cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup raisins

Mix and sift dry ingredients; add melted shortening and enough milk to make very stiff batter. Spread 1/2 inch thick in greased pan; add top mixture. Bake about 30 minutes in moderate oven.

TOP MIXTURE

- 1/2 cup flour
- 1/2 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup butter
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup raisins

Mix dry ingredients; rub in shortening and enough milk to make very stiff batter. Spread 1/2 inch thick in greased pan; add top mixture. Bake about 30 minutes in moderate oven.

ALCOHOL AND CRIME NOT NEAR RELATIVES

No matter what reputation a man may have as an expert, he will be attacked when he offers an opinion on a controversial matter. For that reason we suppose that what Sir Basil Thompson had to say recently upon the relation of alcohol and crime will make no difference in the beliefs of those who heard him. That he is an expert should not be doubted. He was head of Scotland Yard for eight years and in the war years was in charge of Britain's secret service. Before that he had been a prison warden for twenty years, and for another five years Secretary of the Prison Board and Chief Inspector of Prisons. In England, he says, there is no relation between crime and alcohol, if by crime one means felonies and misdemeanors rather than trifling offenses. It is the habitual criminal who wars with society, he says, and English experience is that the habitual criminal, does not drink. If he takes to drink he ceases to be a habitual criminal, for the simple reason that he falls in line. The successful burglar needs steady nerves and a clear head.

Where Alcohol Figures

In crimes of passion alcohol figures more largely than in crimes that require careful planning and execution. Under the influence of liquor a man often loses control of himself and makes assaults and commits murders that he might not have committed, although Sir Basil says that he cannot recall a single case of murder in England and Wales last year in which one could say that if there had been no alcohol there would have been no murder. He says that if one compares the criminal statistics of England with those of the United States he will come to the conclusion that one must look to something other than alcohol for the true cause of crime. In 1922 there were 63 murders in England and Wales, with a population of 40,000,000, and without prohibition. In the United States with a population of 100,000,000, there were 9,200 murders. In the United States, according to figures of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, burglary has increased 1,200 per cent. in the past ten years, and in these ten years there has been less per capita drinking, we are told, in any other decade in the history of the Republic.

Does Not Blame War

Sir Basil also expressed the opinion that the war was not responsible for crime waves, and that it did not develop criminal tendencies in men who lacked them before. He says that the United States did not have a crime wave after the war, which may be the result of the fact that crime in the United States is always at the flood. He remarks that the great increase in American crime began in 1890, the increase being greater between 1910 and 1916 than between 1916 and 1921. In England the greatest crime wave was between 1908 and 1913. It was higher in 1913 than in any war year or any year since. It is true that after the Napoleonic wars there was a crime wave, but that, in his opinion, was due to economic conditions. If a man becomes hungry enough he steals, and this is true at all times; war or no war. At present there is a crime wave in Germany, because living is hard and government has broken down.

Restricting Drink

Living conditions have been hard in England, too, but government has not broken down, and the laws are enforced as rigorously as ever. But more important still, the Government has helped the hungry with unemployment doles and old age pensions. Of sixty-three prisons in the land, the Government has been able to close sixteen, which had all been kept going by seven-day prisoners—murderers and drunkards. This is proof that the English restrictions of the drink evil have been effective with regard to petty crime. Sir Basil says that at no time throughout the war, even when hardest pressed, had the English any idea of prohibition, for the simple reason that those in authority knew that it would be impossible to enforce it. It was found also that in cases of industrial unrest some slackening of the regulations concerning the sale of beer caused the unrest immediately to subside. Prohibition he believes to be foreign to the genius of the English people, and says that unless national characteristics are changed it never will become the law.

Respect for Law

If respect for the law is to be obtained Sir Basil Thompson says that no law must be passed that is not enforceable and is not intended to be enforced. The judiciary must be above suspicion of political or any other influence. The police must be efficient and not subject to removal or demotion except for faults as police. Punishment must be quick, certain, definite. He believes the English murder rate is so low because out of the 63 murders committed last year, the police brought to justice 59 of the murderers. The shortest time consistent with justice is allowed in the criminal class shall know that a sentence passed on one of them will not be watered down by boards of laymen. In England the indeterminate sentence applies only to those between the ages of sixteen and twenty-one committed to reformatory, and others sentenced to preventive detention.

MANAGEMENT OF HOUSE PLANTS.

(Experimental Farm Note.)

Windows opening to the south are usually preferable to those with western outlook. During the winter days the latter will receive but little sun, and that too horizontal. Windows looking to the east may be occupied by a few plants, and are, in fact, for palms, ferns and similar shade-loving plants, desirable.

Where it is difficult to obtain a suitable compost an admixture of street sweepings with fresh garden loam will serve, but if only a small amount of soil is needed it will be wiser to buy some prepared compost from a florist. Pots used, unless new, should be soaked and scrubbed. Never use pots too large; a small plant growing in a great quantity of soil will not remove much water by transpiration.

For seedlings or rooted cuttings the soil should be filled with sifted soil, and the plant placed in a finger-hole made in the centre. The soil is then pressed into place and well watered.

Before re-potting, remove a quarter inch or so of surface soil, then dispoiling of any weeds or algae. Next, place half an inch or an inch of compost in the bottom of a pot, put in a plant, and add enough soil to fill the space. Then furnish a slight covering of fresh surface soil. The soil level should be from half an inch to an inch below the edge of the pot. The hole at the bottom must not be clogged; this is necessary to provide drainage. Pots up to four inch need not have the hole shielded. Above this size, an inch or two of broken pot might be placed in the bottom and covered with sphagnum or rough soil, to keep the soil from washing down and filling the spaces.

Through lack of food a plant sometimes does not make good growth. So long as the roots have not become bound it need not be re-potted; indeed, this would offer a needless check. Scrape away the surface soil down to the roots and replace by a rich soil containing twenty-five per cent. of ground bone.

Provided the plants have proper drainage water should be applied until it runs through the bottom. Too frequent watering is often a cause of success; it wets the surface soil so much as to keep the air out. The soil becomes sour and the water does not penetrate to the roots of the plant—the only place where it will do good.

Dwelling air is usually dry—a condition inviting to the red spider. Dyes may be decreased by evaporating water in the room an by spraying foliage on bright days. Thick-leaved plants may be sponged off with water containing whale-oil soap. Also, give a little ventilation on pleasant days.

At night plants do best in a temperature 10 or 15 degrees lower than they need during the day. Most species used in the house require no more than 50 or 55 degrees Fahrenheit at night, and they will not suffer if the thermometer falls to 40 degrees—though such a temperature maintained for a good while would check growth.

Frozen plants should be thawed slowly. Remove from direct sun-rays and keep at a temperature of 50 degrees to 40 degrees until thawed. If cold water is used the temperature must not rise above this. Water at 50 degrees or 60 degrees will probably harm plants more than if they are allowed to thaw themselves out.

Fines of plants for house purposes may be largely determined from structure and general appearance. Those with thick leaves and a small, fleshy surface are but little affected by a dry temperature, while plants with small, thin leaves quickly dry up.

Deciduous plants that show bare stems in winter are the least decorative. All plants need rest, but those that rest during the summer should be chosen: begonias, abutilons, galls, cyclamen, geraniums, heliopsis and Chinese primroses; also the flowering bulbs—hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, etc. James McKee, Greenhouse Specialist, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, Ont.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL NEWS

Seeding operations have started in the district.

Summer approaches. Straw hats have appeared on the scene.

Gardening operations are now in full swing and much beautiful and needed carnation has resulted.

The members of the Macleod baseball club held a practice on the town square on Tuesday evening.

The shade trees in town are beginning to show a decided lining of green and soon will be in full leaf.

David Wilson returned to Medicine Hat on Tuesday after spending the winter at The Meadows, Stand Off.

Commencing on the 1st day of May the drug stores in town will be closed every evening at 6 p.m., excepting Saturday when they will remain open as usual.

A single teaspoonful of wood alcohol is said to be sufficient to cause death or blindness. A man whose oil-factory nerves are normal could not very well, one would think, mistake wood alcohol for even the most inferior brands of booze now being peddled so satisfactorily.

Water is being turned into the Lethbridge Northern ditch this week.

An official proclamation by the government has fixed Monday, May 29th, as "Arbor Day" this year.

The Mounted Police barracks at Lethbridge sustained a $15,000 loss by fire on Thursday morning. The building is considered a total loss.

A C.P.R. steam shovel is at work in the gravel pit west of town. The material being excavated will, we are informed, be used in ballasting the new Mayberry line now under course of construction.

F. Tatham lost a favorite dog this week in a peculiar manner. The animal was being attacked by a fellow canine when Tatham, fearing for the safety of his pet, jerked the animal apart, the shock breaking his own dog's neck.

It is current rumor on the streets that J. W. McDonald, K.C., would accept nomination for the vacant majority, and that probably A. T. Leather and C. W. Stevens would accept nomination for vacancies on the Council—this sounds as if the Council might be recruited to full strength by acclamation. Nominations will likely be on Monday, May 29th.

A number of local sight-seers motored out to Carleton on Wednesday afternoon to view the wonders of the Norman temple. They returned the same evening.

We regret to record the death of Henry Hobbs, a leading farmer who resided seven miles north of Macleod. The deceased died to-day (Thursday) from pneumonia. The Times was unable to get details to-day from which to write an obituary but this will appear in next week's issue.

The old-fashioned method of chasing an obstreperous school boy did not appeal to the late schoolmaster of a near-by rural school district, who left the beaten path and used a piece of 2x4 scantling instead, severely injuring the feelings of the chastised. The case was brought before a magistrate who imposed a fine of $20 and costs upon the teacher.

The reports coming in from outside points concerning the possible damage by grasshopper pests this coming season are very reassuring. In a few isolated parts the reports are not so optimistic and it is the intention to wage relentless war on the pests in these and other parts. All in all, however the outlook is much brighter at the present moment than for the past two seasons.

We publish this week a poem, the writer of which is a well-known Macleod old timer, in the person of C. E. D. Wool, now a judge of the District Court of Saskatchewan. Mr. Wool, who has many warm friends in this part, was the founder of the second newspaper established in what was then the old North-West Territory, this being the Gazette, of Macleod. The poem referred to will, we feel sure, be read with a great deal of interest by Judge Wool's many friends here.

J. W. Ryan reports that the lilac trees in his garden are showing signs of blooming.

After spending the week-end in Macleod, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George McFarquhar, Mr. Pinnell returned to Calgary on Tuesday. Mr. Pinnell was accompanied by Mrs. Pinnell and her daughter who have spent the last two months here.

Evidence in connection with an Ontario will case was heard before R. F. Barnes, a Commissioner for Taking Evidence, at the Court House Wednesday of this week. The facts appear to be that a man named Brownlee in dying, left an estate valued at about $50,000, the proceeds to be divided between his two children, a son and daughter. The son now seeks to upset the will on the ground of undue influence being exerted by the daughter. The deceased dying at Pincher Creek, a number of Pincher Creek witnesses were in town giving evidence.

TENNIS COURT ELECTS OFFICERS

A well attended meeting of the Macleod Tennis Club was held in the Bank of Montreal on Thursday, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. Presidents—Judge A. M. McDonald, W. H. Shield, M.L.A. President—G. R. Johnston. Vice-president—R. B. Barnes. Sec.-Treas.—H. C. Winter. Committee—R. B. Barnes, Mrs. J. B. Sutherland, Miss N. Watson, P. C. Jones.

The new court, fixed at $500 and High School pupils at $3.00, having certain hours of the day to be allowed to play on the court. The Club is enlarging the courts and hope to have them ready to play on Arbor Day. The outlook for the Club this year is very promising and from all accounts the membership will be the largest for some years. The Club hopes to arrange friendly games with the St. Paul's Tennis Club and outside Clubs and it was decided to have a local tournament as soon as the players have had some practice. Owing to the very heavy expense of altering the Courts, the members are especially regretted to turn in their dues as far as possible, and any new players are asked to contribute. The Club is allowing tourists and visitors the privilege of using the Courts free of charge during their stay in Macleod.

Clarke & Morrison Take Over Good Company Grocery

The Retail Grocery and Provision Store of the Good Co. was taken over last Thursday morning by Messrs. Clarke & Morrison. The deal was closed by Mr. Fritzsche and W. McIntosh of Calgary.

Mr. W. R. Morrison was in the employ of the Good Company since its opening here, and is well known. Before coming to Macleod he was for eight years head clerk for Mader & Clarke, at their stores in Vanguard, Aneroid and Central Butte, Sask., afterwards joining the Dominion Sales Co. Ltd. of Moose Jaw, as their head sales manager.

Mr. B. W. Clarke, while a stranger to Alberta, has been in Sask. for 12 years, being a member of the firm of Mader & Clarke, who have conducted general stores in different towns, and still have a store at Central Butte. It is the intention of the new firm to handle only Quality Goods at the Lowest Possible Price. Their first advertisement appears this issue.

THE PIPER

When I hear the piper, wind, at play
My spirit yields to the music's sway.
And I wander with him to the far away.
I leave behind the wintry clime,
And follow the lure of his strains sublime,
And my happy heart to the pipes keep time.
In dream I roam 'neath a summer sky
Where clouds, like ships, go sailing by.
Nor heed the breath of the winter's sigh:
I wander by freshly foam-flecked streams,
Where bright 'neath the summer sunlight gleamed,
And I live again in the land of dreams.
When the heart is filled with a vague unrest,
And life seems only a fruitless quest,
I follow on at the piper's behest;
And on and on, through life's frown and fear,
His magic music will call me yet
In golden notes, till life's sun is set.
—Helen B. Anderson.

THE FOREST AND RESEARCH

Canada spends about $800,000 a year on agricultural research and not more than $35,000 is devoted to forest research. The forests of Canada occupy about 80% of the inhabitable area and practically the only population in that 80% of our country will have to be attracted by forest industries.

The Laurentide Company Limited of Grand Mere, P. Q., have about 20,000,000 white spruce seedlings and transplants in their nursery.

According to the Western Lumberman the forest revenue of the province of New Brunswick during the four years, 1918-21, averaged $1,061,000. Expenditures averaged $188,000, or only 18% of the revenue. Damage from fire in New Brunswick averaged $442,280.00 per annum.

CANADA'S 100 PULP AND PAPER MILLS

The pulp and paper industry of Canada has 100 mills in operation, forty being pulp mills, thirty-three paper mills, and twenty-seven produce both pulp and paper. Seventeen are news print plants. The present progress of the industry indicates an output of 1,500,000 tons of news print in 1924. This will mean the utilization of over 2,250,000 cords of pulpwood for a single year's newspaper paper output in this Dominion.

Women's Institute
Monthly Meeting

On Tuesday, April 17th, the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Oddfellows Hall. After the usual business, Messames Greenwood and Perry gave an interesting demonstration on Children's clothing. Some very pretty and dainty clothes were shown. The children of Grades 1 and 2 of the Public School, about 80 in number, under the supervision of Misses Laycock and Matheson, marched to the hall and enterained the institute and several visitors with very well rendered and pleasing songs and dramatization of Cinderella. Each one took part well, and much credit is due to their instructors. The children must be complimented on their splendid effort. It was a real pleasure for the W. I. to serve them to lemonade, sandwiches and cake. Several books were distributed to form the nucleus of a library. Afternoon tea was served and the meeting was closed with "God Save the King." On the following day, Wednesday, there were about 35 members attended for the instructive demonstration "On the Marketing and Cooking the Lower Cuts of Meat," given by Miss C. McIntyre, of Claver-holm Agriculture School. She cooked and served a fine lunch, an excellent stew, and explained the food values as well as proving her ability to cook these meats most appetizingly. At the close of the meeting these dishes were served, accompanied by afternoon tea. All the members felt they had spent a very instructive afternoon and no doubt had the weather been more favorable there would have been a much larger attendance. The next meeting will be held on May 15th at 3 p.m. in Oddfellows' Hall and will be Mothers' Day.

GLENWOODVILLE NEWS
